Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Saturday 20 Feb 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Very wet in parts of west and north today. Mild.

Today:
Western and northern areas seeing persistent, sometimes heavy rainfall, especially over hills, although the far northwest clearer with showers for a time. Heavy rain returning here later, with coastal gales. Eastern and southeastern areas drier, breezy and very mild.

Tonight:
Severe gales clipping northwest Scotland early in the night, followed by clear spells and showers. Elsewhere rain in the west easing, confined to southeast England later, where staying very mild.

Sunday:
Rain, mostly light, across southeastern areas of England, probably edging westwards later. Showery in the northwest with some sunny intervals, but a wedge of fine weather in between these areas.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Monday, cloud with some rain across the south, brighter elsewhere with showers in the far north-west. Tuesday/Wednesday, turning much more unsettled in the west/north-west, drier and very mild further east/south-east.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.